

FOUR

For some though, Joe and Rosalie Greco, 2004 was a great year. In April 2004, they moved into their newly built Atlantic Siding and Roofing of Central Florida home in Bay Hill, a 9000 square-foot home that is the essence of fine living. With tongue and groove wood ceilings, custom built cabinetry and a home office that The Donald would envy, every inch needed the time and energy of a full-time contractor.

"Every time I came to my property, one of the owners of Atlantic was on site," says Joe Greco. "We waited for months for them to be our contractors, and it was well worth the wait. They hired only the best subcontractors and ensured that all the work was done professionally and to the highest standard. Their scheduling of jobs was fast and efficient. I would build again with them in a heartbeat."

THREE

The leadership of Atlantic Siding and Roofing of Central Florida comes from three experienced and highly qualified builders: Larry Meyers, Lynn Lambert and Michael Gagne.

Director of Operations Larry Meyers is recently back from tackling several substantial jobs in south Florida. Regarded as one of the best in Florida, he has credentials that include a CCC license for residential and commercial roofing; he is also a preferred installer for most major roofing manufacturers including GAF, Owens Corning and Scandinavian Metal Roofs (to name a few). While his expertise is extremely diverse, he specializes in commercial roofs, specifically, metal and flat roofs.

With a statewide license, Meyers is able to build throughout Florida and is currently working on a 20,000-square-foot metal roof in Tampa and installing an up-and-coming roofing system called TPO in downtown Orlando. TPO (Thermoplastic elastomer olefinic) is a polymer-based membrane that covers a flat roof for maximum protection against water, vapor and other inherent vices. He says, "We strive to learn the latest roofing product and system application, and then we use it on our jobs."

With the roof covered, what about the sides? Certified building contractor Lynn Lambert, Vice President of Atlantic Siding and Roofing of Central Florida, is the right man for any job. He specializes in framing, siding and drywall, custom home building, mass home production and land development. As he puts it, "I care for each and every job as if it was the most important job of my life. Regardless of size, scope, or price, each one gets my full attention."

You can count on Lambert for his consistent and objective quality craftsmanship. He is currently leading Atlantic Siding and Roofing of Central Florida on a construction of a 54-unit condo complex in Tusawilla, but his mastery of this craft (including the house he built for the Grecos) has led him to be featured in Architectural Digest. Yes, his homes are that gorgeous!

Rounding out the team is President Michael Gagne. Much like Meyers and Lambert, he is busy building dream homes throughout Florida. Gagne is also building more than 150 single homes in a planned community in Haines City. In November of 2007, he will begin a similar building project in Winter Garden.

"Quality craftsmanship coupled with superb customer service is what we are all about," states Gagne. "Our goal is to make our customers happy. By building the finest homes to our customers' specifications, we always reach our goal."

TWO

Having two licenses makes everything easier. Having a licensed roofer and a certified builder definitely has its advantages. Entire exteriors, with roofing, may be completed expeditiously because there is one contractor as your liaison. Timetables are more precise, and cost estimates are even more accurate.

Looking for more? For the last 15 years, Atlantic Siding and Roofing of Central Florida has had a spotless record with the Better Business Bureau. In addition, their sales staff are insurance specialists who will negotiate directly with insurance carriers on behalf of homeowners. Patrice Chaffaut points out, "We take out the drudgery of dealing with claim agents from the homeowners. That's less work for you!"

Building your own corporate building—on time, on budget, without headaches!

Could it get any better?
